May 7IMITATING NATURE

Imitating nature

This picture shows a beautiful landscape of the Mother Nature wrapping a light bulb with the inscription "dream, shine" like a beautiful frame. This basically refers to the human ability to watch and imitate nature, based on it as a reference and inspiration. Besides, I want to express a message about an exorbitant use of electricity, which can also damage the landscapes. Why don't we take advantage of the natural light? In this way, depending on where you are in your thoughts when you look at this picture, you would feel the light bulb as a harmonious object of light, lighting up the landscape and linking the components of the picture, or, otherwise, you would consider that this element spoils the composition. It is really curious how an image can play with our brain and our feelings, changing our perception of an element. So, the picture shown establishes the word "light" in its broadest meanings: the sun, a light bulb, glimmers...And, for me the most important thing: The literal meaning of light is "energy which makes things visible". So, according to this, the light is a form of protest, because protest wants to show as something, making us realise about it, and so does light. In this case, about a huge environmental problem. So, I hope my light-filled picture lets someone know we don't care about the planet. Do you see it now? Do you see the light at the end of this tunnel?
